

Aine De Baroid obtained her masters in Pharmacy from Queen's University Belfast. She is currently studying for her PhD in the School of Pharmacy within the pharmaceutical science and practice cluster, specifically bioactive biomaterials and infection control since October 2012. The primary focus of her research is development of light-activated materials for infection control within healthcare. She is a STEM ambassador and is the leader of the Green Impact initiative for her laboratory.